Concerned shareholder of CULP, Inc. urges investor collaboration

Jerald Hammann, a CULP shareholder, urges shareholders concerned about their investment in CULP to collaborate to increase the effectiveness of their actions.

Individual shareholders often lack the voting power to effect meaningful change at shareholder meetings. However, through collaboration, the opportunity exists for shareholders to discuss their investment objectives and assert a proactive posture in addressing board nominations and corporate governance proposals.

If you are interested in discussing your investment objectives relative to CULP or in discussing its 2023 annual shareholder meeting, please contact Jerald Hammann at investoradvocacy411@gmail.com or (612) 470-4478.
